

Mrs. Steinhilber Hears of Death of Brother-in-Law

Mrs. Frank Steinhilber, 1739 Gramercy, received word this week of the death of her brother-in-law, John William Hogg, who passed away Monday at Calabasas. Funeral services were held Wednesday at Inglewood, with Rev. Samuel Hughes, a pastor many years ago of the Methodist church in San Pedro, officiating. Mr. Hogg leaves his widow, Mrs. Emma Hogg, daughter of Mrs. Gabriel Hodge of Lomita, and two children by a former marriage, a daughter, Ivy, at home, and a son in New Zealand.

TWO ISSUES NEXT WEEK

Torrance Herald will publish two issues next week, the first being distributed early Tuesday morning and the second issue at Friday noon. There will be no Thursday publication due to Thanksgiving.

'MY BOY seemed 'lazy''

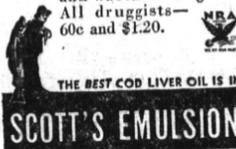

A VERY natural parental thought when youngsters "mope," don't eat, won't play. But doctors will tell you such children usually need more vitamins.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will supply them quickly. A tablespoonful contains more nourishing and disease-resisting vitamin A than a quart of milk. It is also rich in bone-building vitamin D.

Scott's Emulsion has been famous for sixty years—and it is better today than ever. Purely easily digested—nothing to harm the most delicate stomach; easy to take—children love it. Give it to them regularly and watch them grow.

All druggists—60c and $1.20.

California State Liquor Laws Effective When Repeal Ratified

By GEORGE E. HELMER (United Press Staff Correspondent) SACRAMENTO, (U.P.)—An unlimited supply of liquor for the home, but practically none for legal consumption in public places is provided by California's regulatory laws which become effective December 5, when prohibition repeal is formally ratified.

The state board of equalization charged with enforcement of liquor laws, will grant "off-sale" licenses to any retail merchant of good moral character "provided his establishment is not within 200 feet of a church or school. The merchant may sell liquor in original packages, and individuals may purchase as much as five gallons at a time.

There will be few restrictions in the issuing of licenses. And sale of liquor for home consumption will be practically unlimited.

Serving of drinks in public places, however, will be strictly taboo, under terms of the constitutional amendment permitting only wines and beer to be dispensed in restaurants, hotels and other public gathering places. Bona fide clubs will be regarded as "homes," and members may legally take their liquor to the bartender and have him mix their drinks. Guests, however, may not legally carry a bottle into a public dining place and call for mixing materials.

If individuals should attempt to violate that rule, however, their liquor cannot be seized, and they can suffer no serious consequences. The establishment may have its beer and wine license revoked. It permits patrons to drink hard liquor in public.

Private dining rooms are not included in the law. If the rooms are "leased" for an occasion, and are not open to the public, the licensee may have liquor served, just as they could in their homes. Municipal and county governments have no regulatory or police power in the matter, but in cases of violations, they may file a complaint with the board of equalization, which has sole power to investigate and order licenses revoked.

In this respect, local option laws are not effective. The board may issue "off-sale" licenses to retail merchants everywhere in the state—even in communities such as Palo Alto where the people voted against beer and wine. The new liquor amendment is strictly a state proposition. The exclusive right and power to control, license and regulate the manufacture, sale, purchase, possession, transportation and disposition of liquor is placed entirely with the state.

Licenses cannot be revoked because the people in a certain block object to the neighborhood grocery handling bottled goods.

General effects of the law, therefore, as interpreted by Attorney General U. S. Webb, give almost absolute freedom to "original package" transactions, place no restrictions on drinking in the home or in private, but rule flatly against consumption of hard liquor in public gathering places.

Any attempt to liberalize the law, to permit serving of liquor in hotels and restaurants, would necessitate a new constitutional amendment, which would have to be voted by the people at the next regular election. Petitions bearing 110,000 names could force an initiative, or the legislature could vote to place one on the ballot.

California adopted its liquor regulatory laws at the general election in November, 1932, many months before the most optimistic wet leaders believed prohibition repeal could be accomplished inside of four or five years.

Cedar Avenue Extension In Jeopardy

Shall We Allow A Few Dollars To Halt the Development of Torrance?

An Editorial BY GROVER C. WHYTE

Unless quick and decisive action is taken by the Torrance city council, this city, long hampered by the lack of through boulevards, may lose its golden opportunity of securing a much needed artery to the north by the extension of Cedar avenue through the General Petroleum property. December 20 is the final day for accepting the G. P. offer to extend the highway.

After months of negotiations between City Engineer F. R. Leonard and General Petroleum officials, the latter reluctantly consented last May to permit the extension of Cedar avenue through its refinery site. According to the agreement, the G. P. was to donate a 100-foot right-of-way for which it had just paid $25,000. The city in turn was to pay for the erection of a high wire and steel fence on each side of the boulevard at a cost of $9,000. Arrangements were made with the county for paving the highway out of gasoline funds.

The offer made in May carried a 120-day clause, which at the request of the city council was later extended 90 days, bringing the final date for payment of the $9,000 to December 20.

It has been known right along that the General Petroleum, like other refiners, is not anxious to have a public highway bisecting its property because of the fire hazard from passing motorists. With this thought in mind, can the city council afford to let the offer elapse and run the risk of losing its opportunity of securing a much needed highway? We believe not, and every effort should be made to raise the required payment before December 20.

Improvement of the short link of roadway on Cedar avenue through the General Petroleum site will afford a new improved highway connecting Torrance and Hollywood, as Cedar avenue in Torrance connects with Cypress avenue at 190th street, which in turn becomes Crenshaw boulevard, formerly known as Angelus Mesa. Cedar avenue is already paved to the General Petroleum line at 203rd street, and for the payment of a mere $9,000 this city can secure a direct new highway to Hollywood. On this end, Cedar avenue connects with Sepulveda boulevard, also destined to be one of the major arteries of the entire Southland.

The proposed extension of Cedar avenue presents the only feasible plan for securing a new highway between the widely separated Western avenue and Hawthorne avenue approaches to Torrance. For years, this city has been handicapped by the lack of through boulevards. Certainly some means can be found to take advantage of this opportunity, and if sufficient interest is shown on the part of public-spirited citizens, we believe the city council will find a way. But you will have to come up to the council meeting Tuesday night and voice your sentiments.

THE POULTRY PARADE

Thanksgiving leads out first among the holidays with its gay assortment of good eats which is usually included the renowned Turkey. This bird is the spreading tail to its bright, shining comb, even though the name of turkey is deceiving. If you belong to one of the small families that hesitate to buy a whole turkey, make arrangements with another couple to split a turkey but while you are doing it don't forget to divide the giblets, as nothing is any nicer than rich giblet gravy on mounds of fluffy mashed potato or stuffing. When roasting a half turkey, the dressing is placed directly on the pan underneath the bird.

The proper stuffing, trussing, and roasting of the bird makes all the difference in the world in the finished product. The stuffing may be a regular bread dressing with onion and sage, or it may contain chestnuts, oysters, mixed vegetables, dried fruit and nuts, or sausage.

One of my favorite ways for roasting a turkey is under a dough blanket. The procedure is very simple. Just make a stiff dough of flour and water, roll out, and place all over the stuffed, trussed and well greased turkey, being sure that the legs are well covered. Then roast as you ordinarily would, basting not necessary unless the dough becomes too burnt, when plain water is used. After the turkey is done, knock off the dough blanket with a hammer. The fowl underneath will be a delicate, golden brown. With the turkey must go certain time honored accessories—such as cranberries and sweet potatoes, but there is no reason why these should appear in the same form every year. For instance, try a raw cranberry relish this year made with alternate layers of ground cranberries and sugar, packed in a bowl and allowed to stand over night. And try sweet potatoes in a new guise such as

SWEET POTATO CAKES

2 cups mashed sweet potato
1 cup chopped nuts
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of allspice, cinnamon and nutmeg

Flour

Mix sweet potato, nuts, salt and seasoning together. Form into cakes and dip in flour. Then fry.
